him as brother by brother should be tended. There is a wisdom of the heart better -far better than all the wisdom of the head. But I have heard people say what can we do to relieve this Southern distress?—it is a calamity too large for our little help. There are times when trifling services count for much; there are moments when even a word of kindness frankly spoken is worth more than the eloquence of the orator or the schemes of the politician. A cup of water is but little; and yet a cup of water, set within the reach of fevered lips, may give a shock of pleasure to the frame more sweet than draughts of nectar in happier times-nay, dear and priceless in man's dreariest hours is the mere knowledge that he is not all forsaken and another of the great family is near and of 2 per centum ad valorem. feels.
